

We tried to merge computational techniques with a visionary and provocative approach which considers architecture as a part of natural landscape.

The path between two points is no longer a linear connection, but is drawn in order to provide an exciting experience, suspended between sky and mountain.

The structure is made up of small white steel beams joined together in a cubic modular frame; really easy to engineer and build.